As a result, building the canal required much more time, effort, and money than the French originally expected. After about 10 years working on the canal, France finally (④) up.

☼ In 1904, the United States took over* construction of the canal. It took ten more 15 years, but it was finally completed. The first boat passed through the Panama Canal in 1914. The canal became essential for ⑤ () and () travel for ships between the world's two biggest oceans. Now every year, more than 10,000 ships and boats use the Panama Canal.
