Lesson4 Recycling Soap to Save Lives (Para1) / 12min

① Derreck Kayongo, a native Ugandan, arrived in the U.S. for the first time in the early 1990s and stayed at a hotel in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. What caught his eye was three different kinds of soap in the bathroom. (1)A little confused about what to do with them, he used one and put the rest into his bag. The next day, when he came back to his hotel room, he was so surprised to find a completely new set of soap. On the third night, he got upset when he realized that his bathroom was supplied with new soap bars every day even though they were only slightly used. He rushed to the concierge with the soap bars he had kept for himself. He tried to return the bars to the staff, asking, "(2)Please do not charge me extra for these!"
